21 Moor St. Detroit
Melbourne. 21st Dec 1875

Dear Andrew,

I have only time to write you a comparatively short letter, - like yourself I will go in for a long one in the holidays - By the way, I'd half a mind to commence this letter "Dear Sir". Did you think I'd let 3 or 4 posts go by that tell you if either my sister or the parcel was coming?

However, to business - You just got away in time to avoid being fried - We are in the thick of it now - At 10^{PM} I write the thermometer in my room registers 80°, at the office it was 88° in the shade - and this is nothing is what's coming - I like this weather & I like to see this city in it. The heat seems to stimulate the people into activity & the approach of Xmas enlivens us greatly. The hot white streets are full of blinding light & a fine & hazy dust, but thank goodness there's not a breath of air.

I was afraid you would have a dormy & unpleasant passage, but you can afford to laugh at the remembrance of it now.

The little details of our lodgings may now prove some slight interest for you as you have mixed with the people & they are some therefore something more to you than mere names. They all deserve to be remembered kindly - Mac's xxx got better but last night he told me it was recommencing. The other fellows are just the same

We have 2 arrivals since you left, - both Tamm-Collins (brother of Col. Clark at Richmond, Va.) & Connor. The latter is an old friend of mine & decidedly above the others; - he has at least culture to a certain extent.
"Pick!", you exclaim, "What about those books." Ah, yes, I remember - I have obeyed all your instructions literally - I called on Miss Deane, with my sister, yesterday afternoon had an hour's interview. I found her what I expected; - earnest, quiet, self-repressed even, & thoroughly kind - I am to see her again to-morrow, but after the steamer goes, to get from her the Hymn book - which I will either send by post or by my sister who will arrive in Hobt Town by the trip of the "Croft" after the one that brings you this. He discussed Channing & Parker to me ^{and she} gave me an awful of "Tracts, outlines, Essays Sermons" &c all of which I will send by my sister - among them you will find one, Religion as affected by modern Materialism, by the Rev J. Martineau, very interesting - The Theological Review (2 numbers of which she showed me) is an Unitarian production - It cannot be got in Melbourne - nor can the Indies of Christianity. (I enquired at Robertson's to this effect)

I too have dropped into the old groove in the way of life & reading - I got thro' the books & I returned you by dint of reading at home & at the office - I have made moderate progress with Whitman (of whom more hereafter) & got half way through Draco worth, which I like very much & - prepare yourself for an oath-oida's called "Signa" which is not at all bad, - in her pseudo style - I read it because I saw in the Argus a long critique on it, wherein it was stated that it contained some fine wood painting & some Ruskin-like sketches: - all this I found was true.

I hope you will be able to get thro' the News comes - I'm sure you must admire the tender grace, the humorous, half-kind half-serious, the unobtrusive scholarship, the deep knowledge of human nature - and naturalness - and the kind almost womanly tenderness that which seem to me to breathe thro' every page - the dear old Colonel, honest-hearted Clive, charming Ethel - but why particularise? The whole book promises for me a deep undying interest & many a pleasant reminiscence.

I felt very dull after you left & was perhaps a trifle awfully - I have experienced 5 or 6 disappointments - including letters, hopes of remittances &c - and am sadly dejected - but these, - I did not mean to mention -

Don't forget Deloraine - my half-unwelcome fall-back

I spent a most delightful evening at Sutherland's. We discussed Scholarship - Classic & modern. Art (he paints well) Music & and of course the conversation naturally came round to Religion. As Milton well remarks in At the Window when 2 or 3 or moderately intelligent persons are gathered together the conversation inevitably comes round to this subject & he might have added it will be discovered (as in this instance) that some of the company are latitudinarians.
2 bottles of wine & concluded this part of reason. I like Sutherland very much & shall aspiringly court his Society when he returns from Sydney this holiday -

My courtship, or flirtation, or call it what you will, is progressing very steadily - I generally meet her for an afternoon now. I will send her photo by this or a subsequent letter, in which case please return it as soon as possible - though she says her features ought to be impressed indelibly on your memory after your earnest scrutinizing under the lamp - I will take her out all day at Emma's the widow's ~~house~~ (as does my sister) to be very kindly remembered to her by Dawsonell, my friend. I wish I could put in an elegant phrase how warmly & how sincerely I wish you all that usually takes the form of compliments at this season but I cannot do well, as will dear old Milton, take the will for the deed, will you not? Yours Ever yours

P.S. Mr. M. says he doubts to be most kindly remembered - He is writing you
