 St Vincent Place
 Melbourne
 4 July 1885

My dear Andrew,

Your last favor duly received - I should have answered it ere now, but what with indisposition (arising from a bad attack of influenza) and a press of office work at the close of the half year, I have had little time or inclination to do anything.

I mislaid the small ase due to Robertson, and when I called to pay it they could not trace it in their books & did not care to take the money without discovering the debit. Directly I find the etc I will pay it.

This is the period of the year when, perhaps, I feel loneliest in Melbourne.
I think of the goodly gathering which is to take place where I have been so often privileged to be,
and this large city seems very depopulated for me.

I send you some lines to be used in connection with the tract of Australia.

They are imperfect and crude, and written just on the eve of writing this letter.
I send them now as a token of what I would do, and my undiminished regard for the cause.
If you agree with me that they are an imperfect offering put them on one side;
but do not forget to convey my congratulations to all the brothers, and tell them I shall be undoubtedly in the spirit with them on Monday night. In these sentiments the other child, Walter, joins with enthusiasm.

Give my warmest regards to Mrs C. I am a long time fulfilling my promise to write her a letter - She will not, I am sure, attribute this to any forgetfulness of her and her many kindnesses - A few kisses for the children who I hope are, with Mrs C, quite well.

Maternal salutations to Willie Loobie, Ivey & Edwards.
The first named quite well.
I fear sometimes it must be otherwise he remains so quietly silent.

Trust the evening of the 6th will be an unqualified success. Believe me, dear and dear ever affectionately yours
Alfred Stone
