

Structure and Ideology in the Tasmanian Labor Party: Postmaterialism and Party change

By

Peter James Patmore

LL.B., Dip. Crim.

Submitted in fulfilment of the requirements for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy

University of Tasmania, March 2000

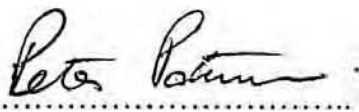

This thesis contains no material which has been accepted for a degree or diploma by the University or any other institution, except by way of background information and duly acknowledged in the thesis, and to the best of my knowledge and belief no material previously published or written by another person except where due acknowledgment is made in the text of the thesis.

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'Peter Patmore', written over a horizontal dotted line.

Peter Patmore

23rd February 2000.

This thesis is not to be made available for loan or copying for two years following the date this statement is signed. Following that time the thesis may be made available for loan and limited copying in accordance with the Copyright Act 1968.

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Peter Patmore", is written above a horizontal dotted line.

Peter Patmore

23rd February 2000

ABSTRACT

The Tasmanian Labor Party has found itself, like many western social democratic parties, recently subject to challenge; not from its traditional enemy, the economic right, but from a new postmaterialist left. This thesis considers the concept of postmaterialism, its rise and role in the formation of new ecocentric political parties, and its impact on the structure, ideology and electoral strategy of the Tasmanian Labor Party.

Maurice Duverger's typology of political parties has been used to elucidate and consider the characteristics and formation of political parties and the importance of electoral systems – particularly proportional representation – in achieving representational success. This typology, coupled with Ronald Inglehart's concept of postmaterialism shows how a conflict of values and a new ecocentric ideology has given rise to new environmental movements and green political parties.

This thesis finds that, in a Tasmanian context, both the Labor Party's history and the impact of Tasmania's peculiar electoral system contributed to the emergence of environmental parties in Tasmania. Further, it finds that the strength of their emergence and the significance of postmaterialism's ecocentric ideology necessitated a serious response from Tasmanian Labor. National and Labor Party surveys, confirmed the existence and persistence of postmaterialism – both in the broader Tasmanian community and the Tasmanian ALP.

As a result of this research, it is argued that some options in meeting the postmaterialist challenge could not be utilised by the Tasmanian Labor Party. Major structural reform would not be effective and ideological renewal would have only limited effect. Thus, the Party has pursued a strategy of retaining party unity while attempting to attract sufficient postmaterialist support to gain majority government.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Many people have provided help and support to me in the writing of this thesis and I thank them all, but two deserve special acknowledgment.

First and foremost I acknowledge my wife Jane. A project of this nature demands a near obsessive focus, often to the detriment of family contact. She understood my obsessions and tolerated my absences, while providing constant support and understanding. I remain constantly in her debt.

I would also like to record my appreciation to Dr. Richard Herr of the Department of Government at the University of Tasmania who supervised this project. Richard's guidance was essential for my completion, for it soon became obvious that I had both underestimated the work required and overestimated my abilities. His enthusiasm and advice kept me going.

ADDENDUM

The danger for any author is finding a suitable point at which to conclude. I had chosen the leadership change from Michael Field to Jim Bacon for it seemed, at that stage, major changes prior to an election were unlikely. However, just as the final draft had been written, legislation was introduced which altered the electoral system to the advantage of both the major parties. Anyone reading this work should be aware of these changed circumstances.

The new Leader of the Labor Opposition, Jim Bacon, introduced the Parliamentary Reform Bill 1998 into the House of Assembly in May 1998. Its main provision was to cut the numbers of the House of Assembly from 35 to 25 and the Legislative Council from 19 to 15. The members of the House of Assembly were to be elected from the existing five electoral divisions, thus raising the quota necessary for election from 12.5 percent to over 16 percent. The second reading of the Bill was defeated by the Government on the 22nd of May 1998.

But the Premier, Tony Rundle, under public and party pressure recalled Parliament on the 22nd of July 1998 for the express purpose of legislating to cut the size of the House of Assembly from 35 to 25; effectively accepting the model preferred by the Labor Party.

In each vote taken during the passage of the Parliamentary reform Bill 1998 the Government and the Labor opposition voted together. Despite intense and heated opposition by the Greens, the Bill passed rapidly through both the House of Assembly and the Legislative Council, commencing operation on the 28th of July 1998. In the election which followed in August 1998 Labor was returned with 14 seats, the Liberals were reduced to 10 and only one Green in the division of Franklin, Mrs Putt, overcame the increased quota to retain her seat.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Statements	ii
Thesis Abstract.....	iv
Acknowledgments.....	v
Addendum	vi
Chapter 1. Introduction	1
Introduction.....	1
The nature of parties	2
Pressures for fundamental change	3
Relationship of the two key themes	5
Structure of the thesis	8
Ancillary methodological considerations	10
Limitations of study.....	10
Chapter 2. Structure and Party Categorisation.....	12
Introduction.....	12
Nature and definition of political parties	14
Party relevance and Sartori – a threshold issue	16
Electoral systems – barrier or frontier?.....	18
Party structures – towards a typology of ideal types	24
Type 1: cadre party	25
Type 2: mass party.....	28
Type 3: devotee/charismatic party.....	32
Criticisms of typology – the impact of societal change on ideal types	36
catch-all party type	38
framework party type.....	41
Indicators of institutionalisation and its effect.....	44
Party development and structural limitations	46

Pragmatists, ideologues and lobbyists	49
The different preferred roles and structures of parties.....	50
Leadership autonomy and its benefits	52
Conclusion	56
Chapter 3. Ideological Change and its Influence on Structure	57
Introduction.....	57
Changes to terminology.....	58
Ideology and Change	60
End of ideology.....	60
Transition to postmaterialism	62
New politics and the characteristics of its supporters.....	63
An explanation of the new values – postmaterialism	65
Inglehart’s theory on the relationship between economic security and postmaterialism	66
The spread of postmaterialism through generational change	68
Criticisms of Inglehart’s theory	68
Criticisms based on the role of education.....	71
Environmental parties and green politics	73
Green continuum	75
Anthropocentrism	77
Eco-capitalism and eco-socialism.....	78
Ecocentrism	79
The Effect of Ideological Change on Structure	85
Opportunities and constraints for formation of ‘new politics’ parties.....	85
The conflict of values	89
Conservative response	93
The challenge of new ideology.....	94
The socialist dilemma – a structural response to new ideology.....	95
The relative positions of the parties – ideological and structural changes.....	98

Difficulties of accommodation and alliance potential.....	101
Conclusion.....	104
Chapter 4 Established Tasmanian Parties – Influences and History	105
Introduction.....	105
Tasmania.....	106
Government and the growth of traditional parties	109
Anti-Labor and Liberal Parties	110
Liberal control over policy / leadership autonomy	112
Revenue/funds	114
Membership	114
Liberal party as cadre.....	116
Labor history.....	117
Control over policy / leadership autonomy	118
Revenue / fees.....	120
Strong leadership – Ogilvie to Reece	122
Hydro-industrialisation.....	125
Labor after Reece – membership fluctuations and internal divisions.....	128
The structural rigidity and ideological dogmatism of the ALP	132
Attitudes of established parties and their role in the creation of new parties	134
Opportunities for and constraints on forming new parties in Tasmania	137
The first election of an environmentalist.....	139
Tasmanian Electoral System.....	141
Hare-Clark	141
Tasmania’s system and multipartyism.....	147
Conclusion.....	148

Chapter 5 Emergence of Postmaterialism and a New Ideology

in Tasmania	150
Introduction.....	150
Lake Pedder – the first conflict.....	151
United Tasmania Group – the first environmental and postmaterialist party	155
Franklin River debate – a postmaterialist challenge to the Labor Party....	159
The rise of the Greens.....	168
Wilderness as sacred.....	169
Bob Brown and charisma.....	171
Post-1982 – The environment dilemma for the ALP.....	175
1986 election – another defeat for Labor.....	177
Wesley Vale – a final rebuttal of development politics.....	179
1989 election – the balance of power	183
The Tasmanian Parliamentary Accord	185
Accord negotiations.....	186
Union backlash against the Accord	189
Accord tensions between the Greens and Labor.....	191
Salamanca Agreement	194
End of the Accord.....	196
Conclusion.....	197

Chapter 6 Labor’s Response to Postmaterialism – the Current State of

Tasmanian Parties	199
Introduction.....	199
Labor’s structural and strategic changes.....	200
Another defeat for Labor – the 1992 election.....	200
ALP restructuring	202
Labor’s moves to increase membership.....	205
Relationship with the unions	206
APPM dispute – Labor’s support of the strikers	206
Department of Construction redundancies	207

Trades and Labour Advisory Council.....	208
ALP strategy to regain traditional and ‘soft green’ voters.....	209
Internal Labor opposition to its election strategy	211
A vindication of strategy – the 1996 election	213
ALP strategy post 1996	215
Labor’s leadership change	218
Conclusion.....	222
Chapter 7 Structural and Ideological Comparisons	224
Introduction.....	224
Structural comparisons	225
Labor as a mass party	225
The Greens as a charismatic framework party.....	227
Control over policy/leadership autonomy	228
Catch-all.....	232
Ideological comparisons	235
Attitudes to society	235
Ideological levels.....	236
Involvement / commitment of members.....	238
Tasmanian Greens ideology	239
Green voter profile / membership.....	245
ALP voter profile	253
Conclusion	259
Chapter 8. Labor and Community Surveys.....	261
Introduction.....	261
Community and Labor Party Surveys.....	263
Survey indicators of materialists and postmaterialists in Tasmania.....	266
Materialist/postmaterialist questions	267
AES surveys – postmaterialists in the community	268
Education and socio-economics	268

Social issues.....	269
Environment	270
Labor’s survey – postmaterialists in the ALP	270
Labor’s survey indicators of postmaterialism	272
Education and socio-economics	272
Social issues.....	272
Economics.....	273
Political activism	273
Environment	273
Generational replacement	274
Definitions of ‘left’ and ‘right’	275
Left/right self-placement	278
Labor Party members characteristics	279
Occupation.....	279
Age and length of membership.....	279
Women in the ALP	280
Electoralates.....	281
Members’ left/right placement of the Party	282
Attitudes to other parties.....	283
Approval of social movements	285
Comparison of characteristics of ALP and the electorate.....	286
Education	287
Social class.....	288
Religion	288
Left/right self-placement	289
Approval/disapproval of Greens.....	290
Social policy	291
Economic issues.....	293
The environment.....	296
Attitudes to government and politics.....	299
Political activism	299
Conclusion	300

Chapter 9. Labor's Response to Postmaterialism	302
Introduction.....	302
What were the options?	303
Alliance potential.....	305
Labor/Green.....	308
Liberal/Green.....	310
Liberal/Labor.....	310
Majority government	312
What the surveys disclose.....	313
Left/right self-definition	313
Differences within the Party.....	316
Materialist/postmaterialist	317
Generational change	319
Education and social class	320
Attitudes to other parties.....	321
Differences with the electorate	322
Social policies.....	322
Economic issues.....	323
A Political Response to Postmaterialism.....	324
A static assessment of the Tasmanian political scene.....	324
Green adaptiveness as a factor.....	325
Structure.....	325
Inconsistent ideological statements	328
Lack of a coherent strategy	330
Labor's response	331
The dimensions of the challenge for Labor	331
Party structure.....	334
A new Labor strategy – majority government.....	336
Conclusion.....	338

Chapter 10. Conclusion	340
Introduction.....	340
General findings.....	341
The Tasmanian findings	343
Implications of postmaterialism and some consequences of party change	347
Tasmania.....	347
Broader implications.....	352
Appendix	354
Selected bibliography	367