

Wednesday 12th Feb

My dearest Jane,

I have rec^d. your letter of yesterday date & at the same time one from dear John, which I send you & I fear he is flattering me in the account he gives of himself however I have no objection to the arrangement Doctor proposes provided it is at all necessary. I have written to John on the subject & expect to receive an answer from him on Tuesday when I will communicate it to you -

Send the sugar immediately to Lutterell's boat on the old wharf he has a warehouse there, & direct it may be sent up to Forbes by the first opportunity. The sacks are not dear if they are but cotton. Let them be sent to Forbes' with the sugar -

I saw Student yesterday but he did not say any thing about the parcel however I will go over this evening & enquire about it -

I am troubled; I am bowed down greatly I go mourning all the day. I shall never recover this stroke. May God of his infinite mercy ble^s the affection to us all -

Your affectionate Father
J. Keble
