My dear friend
Charles Croxby,

It was indeed very kind of you, to be at the trouble of answering the important questions I put to thy dear wife, in a letter to her a few weeks back. I was indeed very anxious for my little son is very dear to me. But those, hast set my mind at rest upon the subject of the past, and I must trust for the time that is to come. — The舵 of my heart has been, that should the mercy it should be a member of our own society, a Christian man who would strengthen her own religious feelings and lead her upwards. — But the matter is in God's hands, and I must leave it there. — I trust He will be gracious to them. — I dare try no more lest I do them a wrong. — My brother William says they are both children. — So they are, and I believe Time is the youngest by more than a year, so they certainly will have to wait some time yet. But children sometimes know their own minds as well as older people often do. — We are all children and know not how to act right, except our Father guide us. —

Thine sincerely,

Sarah Benson Walker.
