Remarks:

- The weather this month was cold as usual, and as the last rain came so promptly in the vegetation was the result. It rained on the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd. The disease is still prevalent, and the corn is withered. The corn has not grown as well as in 1836, and the weather has been unusually dry.

- The harvest has begun to show itself, and by the middle of the month, the crops are now mature. The weather has been dry, and the corn is ready for harvest.

- The disease may have been caused by the drought, as the corn has not grown as well as in previous years.

- The weather has been unusually dry, and the corn is ready for harvest. The harvest has been completed, and the corn is ready for market.

Private 24th returned on duty.
Agreeable to the request of the late Dr. Sinice, Society of... of the observations I have had the opportunity of making on the effects of drink on the officers and their families who have at various times been stationed at this.

The daily ration of spirits to a soldier is 1/10 of a gallon, unless there be none in store or the soldier is on any day away from the station. In lieu of 1/10 of a gallon of sugar is substituted in lieu of the ration of spirits.

As however the stores are usually quite well supplied with spirits, it gives the soldier a right to them, and therefore follows that he can demand spirits as his proper ration.

It is remarkable what an eye he watches the exact fulness of the measure, and how observant he is of the spirit being in any way deteriorated in quality.
Can there be any wonder that so great a kindness should be contracted by the officers, for the best spirits. When he receives such a regular daily supply of them, producing alarming effects upon the human constitution, which is not, in the least degree, from his daily dose of poison, indeed the head of punishment alone presenting many of the soldiers from indulging in such thinking as excessive; but here is a strange anomaly in Military Law that, while it provides for the punishment of the soldiers for drunkenness, it creates in a great degree of the means of inducing Rations of attendance, and continuing those habits where they have been induced (or else it attacks so great an instance of this beneficial Ration that the dislike of it is used as a mode of punishment.

So far as my observations have gone, the greater number of Punishments have arisen from intoxication or are moderation, connected with it, formerly being so excessive that it was thought it was by the public punishment to be avoided. In order to avoid intoxication each army officer must rigidly CORS.
mised Rations of Spirits is drawn daily from the Stores, & with the view to prevent his saving his Rations until they amount to a sufficient quantity for a Day's bche, which confirmed drunkards being in, it is sometimes ordered to be mixed with one or two parts of Water previous to its being issued.

When parties are sent into the Bush or occupy an outstation at such a distance from the Stores as to prevent them from daily drawing their Ration of Spirits, they are then obliged to take the substitute of Tea & Sugar.

The Ration of Tea & Sugar is by the5 Sirs not to be an equivalent for that of the Spirits

1st. Because of theSupplies of it has been created for answer Spirits & nothing else can satisfy.

2nd. His Ray Provides him with Tea & Sugar & other such necessaries, government furnishing him with Meat & Flour.
3. The sugar is not proportionate in quantity to the tea; the same quantity of sugar.

4. The value of the tea sugar is far less than that of the spirits, although it is not mentioned by Mr. Adam, that the spirits are the cheaper ration, being only one-sixth of the price. But it would not be possible for any man to be protected at double the price the tea sugar would cost him.

If the married officers value the sugar of the spirit ration is much greater than the undeclared who drink it alone — while the married divides it with his wife — even his children fall in for a share of this precious portion.

But sometimes they have deprived themselves of the whole or part of their spirits for the sake of selling them more particularly, previous to the establishment of a public house at 3d. per shilling from their scarcity, they bore a very high price — I believe this traffic to have been carried on notwithstanding all the means that could be devised to procure a disclosure so great.
was the league between the buyer & the seller.

I have long known the wives to be infected with habits of intemperance, but the children have often suffered by being indulged with small quantities of spirit and their constitutions have become impaired if disease indicated.

Why is there, in general, so small a number of children in soldier's families? In comparison with the length of time they have been abroad, may not this partly be ascribed to habits of intemperance in the parents? Is there indulging their children with that which is so fond of themselves? A mother once asked me to give her something to put into the peas as her child (not more than 3 yrs old) had contracted such a liking for it that he would go to the barracks at the time the single men were receiving their rations & having some given him by them, he would return to his mother on such a state that he could not be pacified until she had given him more. Hence his solution of Tartar Emetic to add to the spirits. Whenever he asked for more but as the fumes was soon after removed from the scene. I never learned whether it had produced the desired effect. The Child had a younger companion. They together had learned so well the time the spirits were issued that at the ringing of the bell they would seek out each other & calling out that it was time they would both hasten to the Barracks to obtain some from the men. This latter child has laboured under disease induced by the Spirits. The Parents are so well convinced of their calamitous effects that they have done all in their power to prevent his having any, though I have at times understood he would not be pacified until they gave him some.

In conclusion I may remark that I have long expected that the Emancipation Society would have had its days of enlightening influence even upon the military of this Colony. That short dwelling words have been witnessed both by officers and private in the real Colours. This work's too much required work has yet to be accomplished & although the task of producing such a revolution among them is of a formidable character we may hope for its accomplishment & even if other reasons are found to doubt instead of to doubt.

By the abrogation of the laws relating to the importation of spirits it has been mentioned with respect to small parties on detachment, so at those others where so Commanding officer could like sugar might be fixed in lieu of the spirits while at sea & after a Temple for society might be instituted amongst both officers without it this would those principles which have been of so much benefit to other classes of the human race gradually insinuate themselves amongst the military.
with earnest desires that something may be accomplished in this respect.

To the Colonial Secretary,

I beg leave respectfully to submit the following case of George Lawrence, a poor unfortunate, to your notice. George Lawrence, a poor unfortunate, claims the sympathy of Government. He, a former prisoner in the Penitentiary, has been free about one year, but subject since his return to epileptic fits, was seized about six months since with one whilst in the act of placing a damper among the ashes to be burned, and falling into the fire was so severely burnt as to incapacitate him from gaining a maintenance. His face was so much injured that his right eye is now lost, and his left hand is nearly all destroyed, being in a helpless condition, as well as other subject.

The Inhabitants of this District are raising a subscribt among themselves for the purpose of sending him home to his friends. But consider whether it would be improper to send him home without being certain that his friends are willing to receive him and able to provide for him; as if not placed under the care of his friends he might return to his old associates and habits, and again become a burden on the Public.

Therefore, the intention to place the subscription in the Savings Bank until Satisfactory information is received from his Majesty in the mean time it is the anxious wish of himself and the resolutions of the District that Lieutenant C should be placed in some situation where he can be taken proper care of on their behalf as at their request I have the honor to intimate the Earl [get] will be pleased to allow his reception into the naval hospital at New-York.

I remain respectfully,

George T. Stagg.

April 10th 1828.

Mr. C.,

The Assistant of Civil Accounts.

I have fully and fairly a claim for Med. Attendance to the request held on the body of a young man. The case has been examined and it has been considered that the best interest of the patient would be served by his return home. I have been obliged to write them & if not correctly I shall find a copy by being furnished with the printed forms of Mr. [get] have authority.

Remarks:

The rain has been light, the vegetation has profited by it. The long drying spell is over and we are now seeing the return of vegetation. The weather is improving and the sun is shining. The soil is now ready for planting. The gardens are looking much better. The plants are growing well. The rain has been scarce, but the soil is now ready for sowing. John Campbell, on the 12th instant, 30th last month, was yesterday coming to breakfast, took some medicine for colic, which immediately produced vomiting followed by great thirst. To quench this, the physicians gave him to drink constantly of cold water; about nine o'clock he became so weak he was unable to procure his shoes himself. His servant lent gave it to him that the symptoms aggravated, and at 10 o'clock he expired. The Body on examination of the Countenance with yellow hue; the fingers contracted and nails fugitive. The muscles of the right side were more evident than on the left. The stomach, the large appeared of a great mass; mingled with Buboes. Several old divisions on right side. The heart of small appearance, on opening the Stomach a quantity of frothy fluid was found; the Small intestines were thickly injected with blood; these blood disturbed with air. The coat transverse contained a little mucous of duely color. The colon was contracted to a size larger than the small intestines the contraction being former to the Riverdale, Oct. 30th, 1837.

Strong: Bell 11oc15, 5:30 p.m.

By Dr. Moore, Liv. 8 Sept 1837.

The patient is in a state of emaciation, with a decrease of weight of 10 pounds in the last month. The appetite has somewhat improved, but he is very weak and complains of constant dizziness. The color is not much altered, and the pulse is regular. The respiration is quick and shallow.

31st. Since last report has had one or two attacks of fits in short fits were relieved by stimulating, the spauta has ceased all plains off, until the last attack off, which the experts do not diminish very much, in the above same appearance, occasionally a little more after two hours in Godolphin in the bottom of his antler. about 26 mary.

for the report, again announced of a few little black patches at the size of a child's egg were observed in the sputum.

In the afternoon of Oct. 11, the cough left him, but he did not feel well. His breath came up with difficulty; he was like a fusty bed. The bed now on his left side cannot lie in his body for fear of expectoration. Cough, pain in his right side. Bowels about 31st were confined until after this change in appearance of the sputum. They are loose 30th. To this appears a likely than yesterday has not brought up as much of bloody expectoration, but more less in the blood of the common expectoration. His cough relieved. He hired almost black, his nose has continued bleeding at intervals. Which the blood appears to trickle from his right ear to his mouth. The bleeding has relieved his head, he says. He can converse better, not being so low heavy, fears that he will not survive having lost all hope of recovery. Countenance has sunk much within this last week. If has fallen away more in flesh his eyes are sunk in his limbs very thin, countenance flushed. Before purple spots from the rise of the blood to that of the sputum. Before this attack of sanguineous expectoration, he was prepared much; felt very warm now he feels cold, his fingers are pale, trembled. To have 6 drops of ad digitalis every hour until 12 p.m. Stays up at bed time.
