8 March 1911

Dear Williams,

I have thought of the following as books I should like to lecture on next year:

1. Greek I P.B.C.
   Lysias: Brahms VII. (14), VIII. (16), IX. (17), X. (19), XIV. (28)

2. Greek III C.
   Aristotle: Ethics as for 1911.
   [I have Burnet's annotated edition now, but on the whole I think Burnet's plain text will be more] suitable.

3. either
   a) Latin I P. C. Ciae. Defficius
   b) id. (Holden)
   or (b) id. Vergil, Agm. 9-10 or (c) Latin I C P.
   Ciae. Pro Milone

4. Latin III C.
   Syrætius I.
   The only suitable edition I know of is J. H. W. Lee's edition of Bks. I-III. (Macmillan)
   It is very much inferior to Buff's editions, but I suppose it will do.

5. I have thought also of a prose book for Latin P C M P.
   Seneca: Select Letters
   The matter is interesting & the introduction is extremely good. Section A on the Poetical Style & Section C 'Seneca's Life, its Critics & Debtor' is admirable.
   Benson, who was four weary of illustrating the influence of Seneca on 17th-century English authors. As the book is rather long it would probably be better to omit at least Letters 90 to 122. That would leave 113 pages of text as against 126 in Tyrrell’s Selection of Cicero last year. If you think it a suitable book, but don’t care to lecture on it yourself, I shall be glad to take it. I did a good part of it in Adelaide. But if you would like ‘paraphrase loca nullius antea buta solo’, it would suit me equally well to take any other Latin book e.g. two out of the Three mentioned under (3) or one of these along with Martianus Capella.

I shall leave Seneca’s letters and Burnett’s Ethics on your desk tomorrow.

Very truly yours,

R. L. Dungate
