11. A complete set of bronze tetradrachms struck in Egypt under the emperor Caracallus—Augustus, except Caligula, who struck no silver in Egypt at all. These coins (except the numismatices of Marcus Aurelius and Commodus which are rather rare but by good luck are here well represented) are of the face value of about a dollar each. The amount of alloy varies, but on the average they contain about 1 part silver to 5 of copper. Each of these coins has been selected from very many others. The features are brought out best by letting the light pass from the left side of the coin, alighting upon the chest or by carrying about in the pocket. The weight in the way of appearance. The years are shown by ordinary Greek numerals. L = year, but no other known why.

10. Another type of Caracallus on coin of Nero. Struck in 15th year. 66-67 AD.

11. Tiberyus "TIBERIUS CAESAR" [A.D. 14.05.35 15.03.35] [A.D. 17.01.35 18.01.35]. On reverse of coin, with crown. Gees ZEBAETOS = Proconsul Augustus. This coin was struck by Tiberyus himself and is a very fine specimen. The coin is comparatively rare. It is interesting to compare the features here given with those on the reverse of the coin of Nero, the smallest of the 16. It is smaller than the silver drachm.

12. TIBERIUS in a coin struck in the 13th year of Nero's reign.

13. TIBERIUS in the reverse of coin of Nero. TIBERIUS CAESAR [A.D. 14.05.35 15.03.35] [A.D. 17.01.35 18.01.35]. On reverse of coin, with crown. Gees ZEBAETOS = Proconsul Augustus. This coin was struck by Tiberyus himself and is a very fine specimen. The coin is comparatively rare. It is interesting to compare the features here given with those on the reverse of the coin of Nero, the smallest of the 16. It is smaller than the silver drachm.

14. Claudius <61-54> 6th year: 49.68 AD. A.D. 987. [A.D. 102.03] [A.D. 103.12]

15. Claudius on reverse. Messana. MALANNA CAESAR. 6th year. 5th year. [A.D. 107.11] [A.D. 108.11]

16. New in 5th year of his reign. Compare him with portrait on coin of Augustus. This coin belongs to the close of the "octuavennium Augusti." [A.D. 107.11] [A.D. 108.11]

Note: The dates are given in the form A.D. followed by the year of the reign.

Terracottas B.C. £5.

Terracottas (The terracotta come partly from Memphis and partly from the Fayum. The result of some hard but successful expeditions...). If the soil begins to come out of the Egyptian lamps, stand them in water for some hours, changing the water, and then dry them. Soil is a nuisance, but it is an infallible proof of genuine antiquity. It depends on what kind of ground they were buried in. K.T.F.

Coins 1-95 were presented by Mr. Andrew Holden and cost £10.

The two terracottas, the Greek vase, and coins 96 and 97 were bought by the University from Mr. E. in the same year (1909) and cost £5. I sent Mr. F. the coins 98-122 in 1910 and wrote with regard to the remaining 123:

"The bulk of that is represented by the present lot viz. coins 99-123, and hopes to send the rest soon. But they have not yet arrived (23.11.1909).

1. Roman Republican Denarii
      On reverse a Gorgo with strange weapons in a chariot. This meant to represent the Roman king Bibullus who was defeated by one of the family. Underneath is the legend L LIC AED CVRS - L. Licinius Gnaeus Romanus.

   Reverse. The infant Jupiter, Romanos and Roma suckled by the Wolf.
   (I cannot assign this coin to a Gorgo with certainty yet.)

3. Head of Cybele, with crown of leaves.
   A-PLATIVS AVST R.C.S.C. - Q. P. Platorus Aesulus Aesulus Senator Consul
   On the reverse, BACCHVS VIGOROS Xuenz holding an olive branch in his right hand and holding a cornel with his left.

   On reverse two obelisks, whose inscriptions being driven by a Roman (with reins which pass over the back and are fastened to the ears) with a wreath of victory is shown.
   This refers to the great victory of Metellus at Panormus in the 1st Punic War, when he captured the Carthaginian elephants and had them killed in the Roman amphitheatre.

5. Coin of Marcus the Younger. He wears a crown and stands beside a Roman soldier, the right hand on his shield.
   Head of Corn, alluding to the agricultural origin of the Roman gens.
   CAPIT in Capite (The numerals on these coins vary and I have not been able to find out their meaning).
   On reverse, plowing with yoke of Oxen.
   [In reverse: A. Cato R. Cato."
   "Cato the Younger" was M. Junius Calpurnius Cato.]

   Head of Venus from whom the Geno was descended.

II. A complete set of first rate silver coins struck in Egypt under the Empire.
   Shown by the Emperor Augustus - Commodus except Caligula who struck no silver.
   These coins (except those of Trajan, Caracalla, and Commodus) which are neither rare but yet good luck at how well preserved are of the face value of about 2 dollars each. The amount of alloy varied, but on the average they contain about ten parts silver to two parts. The few... The years are shown by ordinary Greek numerals. L = year but no one knows why.

Terra Cottas.

1. Girl's head.
2. Lamp of Ptolemaic period. Hole in handle for string to hang on a nail. From the ruins of Memphis.
3. Ptolemaic lamp from Memphis.
4. Boy with pateras.
5. Ptolemaic lamp from the Fayum. Some of the salt is coming out.
7. Lamp with five wicks.
8. A scene with helmet. This head shows traces of fire (perhaps from the sack of the city).
9. Serapis. (Serapis is distinguished from Zeus by his peculiar crown). This is really a handle broken off from a large lamp.
10. Greek-Roman lady with an elaborate way of doing her hair which is not unusual at the period. The ears are bored for earrings which were probably of copper gilt or lead painted.
11. Lamp with lion, from the Fayum.
12. Serapis holding scaphe and wreath. Beside him is an eagle.

Greek Vase. Date about 400 B.C. Brought from a tomb. £1.

The vase is contemporary with Serapis and was acquired by me in Athens eight years ago.
